Introduction — there must be a better way, and why Parliament has finally moved

Four decades of change — Children Act, Domestic Abuse Act and transparency

The June 2025 consultation — reforming financial remedies on divorce

Codification plus — capturing judge-led change in statute

Prenuptial agreements — making qualifying agreements legally binding

Cohabitation — 3.5 million couples and the common law marriage myth

Why should a child's financial support depend on whether parents were married?

Private law and separating parents — keeping families out of court

Child focused courts — social work reports before any hearing, £82 million rollout

Adoption at 100 — a model built for babies that now serves three-year-olds

Lifelong links — maintaining relationships for children in care and care leavers

Enduring relationships policy — the government's new ambition for children in care

Surrogacy — a law unchanged for 30 years and a growing commercial problem

Foreign surrogacy — two women in their 60s, Northern Cyprus and four years in limbo

The commercial elephant in the room — and what Parliament must address

Conclusion — family law has never stood still, and the future will be digital
